

Frequently Asked Questions about Billeting a Hockey Player

What is a billet family? Many players leave home to play Junior hockey. A billet or host family home is where a player lives during the season. This is a player's home-away-from-home.

Are billet families paid? A pre-established fee of $450 (TBD) per player per month is paid directly to the billet family. This helps with additional household expenses, especially food and drink. As well as Menace Season tickets to come cheer on your billet son.

Is there a "typical" host family? Host families may be two-parent families, single-parent families, and occasionally an "empty nester." The common denominator is a desire by the host family to make a difference in a player's life.

Can a family host more than one player? Yes. Two, at most. Players can share transportation expenses, and often provide company for one another. The only requirement is that each player has adequate space/living arrangements. Each player is expected to have his own bed, closet or dresser, and acceptable access to a restroom.

How long does a player stay? Players arrive in mid to end of August. This also allows sufficient time for high school and college student enrollment, and to get ready for training camp. The host family commitment is through the end of the hockey season. Sometimes an arrangement is made between the player's family and the billet host family for the player to stay until the end of the school year.

Who pays if a player is injured or needs medical attention during his stay? Players must have medical insurance from their own families. Billet host parents are never responsible for medical payments.

Will players join our family for personal events? You are welcome to invite players to join you for family celebrations or activities; however, it is not mandatory for you to do so. All players will have time off at the holidays.

Will the billet player stay for holidays? The breaks are dependent on the team's game schedule and usually only allows players to return to their parent's home once or twice during the season.

What happens if we have to leave home for an extended period of time? Players shall not be left alone without adult supervision overnight unless otherwise arranged. If a billet host family has vacation plans that will result in an overnight absence, the Milton Menace will place the player in temporary housing until the billet host family returns. Arrangements must be made, through the Milton Menace, for the player(s) to stay with another host family, a teammate, or a friend from school/work.
